CAMPAIGN TRAIL CELEBRITY SNAP

We recently published a photo sent in by Iowa resident (and tireless campaign groupie) Brian Neises that showed Donald Trump signing Neises' copy of MAD #535, which featured Hillary Clinton on the cover. As a uniter, not a divider, Neises then went out and nabbed a shot of him with Hillary holding MAD #537 — which featured Donald Trump on the cover! For his efforts, Brian will again receive a ton of swag and a limited-edition Alfred print! And if you can get a Celebrity Snap of a presidential candidate on the campaign trail, you'll also get free stuff! Hurry—there are fewer candidates every month and Neises is on the hunt!

MISUNDERSTAND BY ME

I don't like to just throw out the issue of MAD once I've read it. So I usually put it in the laundry room of my apartment building.

It seems like someone often takes it and just throws it out. I can't understand that! Can you explain it?

Miriam Goldberg • Rego Park, NY

Good as Goldberg — What a mystery! After sleepless weeks of pondering your question, we've come to the conclusion that one of two things must be happening. The first: that your laundry-room trash can is a mystical vortex to another dimension, and its powerful suction has been pulling in your secondhand MADs (and possibly your soiled unmentionables). The second: that MAD is useless junk, and that whoever has been coming after you has been putting it exactly where it belongs! Hmm...each option seems equally likely to us. Will we ever know the truth? —Ed.

NOTE-UNWORTHY

At the end of the best-selling young adult novel, Mr. Lemon-cello's Library Olympics, author Chris Grabenstein mentions MAD in his Author's Note (and not in a negative way!). If ever there was an indicator that someone's book is worth skipping, this is it!

Every month, MAD was filled with hysterical satires of TV shows and movies, sarcastic spoofs, and funny fake ads. The thing was pure irreverence in ink and paper. MAD (along with Rocky and Bullwinkle cartoons) did more to spark my love of words and humor than anything else during my middle school years.

And he goes on like that for another page! Jeez, guy — get a room! On the other hand, we can never help but kiss the ass of any sucker foolish enough to praise us, so we immediately begged to give away copies of both "Mr. Lemoncello" books in this issue!

MANUAL LABORS

I was very excited to read your four-page ad about the ForceSonic 92-cm Lightsaber in MAD #537 and I've decided I'd like to buy one for myself. Where should I send my credit card and mailing information to?

Zsolt Szabo · Toronto, ON

Zsolt of Lightning — While we're happy that you liked the ForceSonic article, we're a bit worried about your ability to navigate the complex modern world. After all, the article in question was actually — as its title clearly stated — an "Owner's Manual," not a "four-page ad." For your own good, Zsolt, don't be so eager to give out your personal information to any Tom, Dick or Harry who you mistakenly think has a lightsaber to sell! That being said, we do know a guy in Jersey who runs a ForceSonic Lightsaber business out of his garage. If you just send us your credit card number, mailing address and — just to be safe — your Canadian Social Insurance Number, we'll be happy to drive out and pick one up for you! —Ed.

REMEMBRING JOHN CALDWELL, 1946-2016

It is with profound sadness that we report that long-time MAD writer/artist John "Hammerhead" Caldwell passed away on February 26 at the age of 69. John became one of "The Usual Gang of Idiots" in October 1978 (MAD #202) and, over the years, he contributed hundreds of pages to the magazine. He earned the enduring nickname "Hammerhead" after nearly destroying a piece of his original cover artwork by mailing it to the MAD offices protected only by two flimsy pieces of cheap cardboard (the kind you would get when buying a dress shirt at the Dollar Store). We honor John (if not his shipping methods) by running one of his classic articles in this issue's installment of "The MAD Vault." We extend our deepest condolences to John's wife, Diane and his entire family.

TOILET STORY

I am 12 years old, love the magazine and have a story I'd like to share with you. Last week my great uncle came over to our house as usual to say hi and ask how everyone was. Then he went to the bathroom and something inexplicable happened! He actually used real toilet paper when we'd clearly placed your magazine right next to the toilet (where else?)! He came out laughing as hard as he could, at the top of his lungs, to the point of wheezing lightly...and he said, "I had these when I was a kid, I can't believe they still print these." (Frankly, neither can I!) He ended up keeping it. (Or we just stuffed it in his bag to get rid of it!) Lastly I'd just like to thank you to for bringing joy to old people who, when they were kids, were stupid enough to buy one of your magazines. Thank you.

Sebastian Kaplan • Address Withheld

Salary Kaplan — You almost lost us at "he went to the bathroom and something inexplicable happened," but we stayed with your heartwarming tale of elderly defecation, and we're glad we did!

At MAD, we relish the unique opportunity to bring families together and bridge generational divides. And we loved the fact that you gave him the issue, so that, once home, he might further rekindle bittersweet memories of his long-lost youth. Also, since he strikes us as the type of guy who wouldn't wash his hands after his explosive great-uncle dumps, that copy was probably a lost cause. Either way, it's a real win/win for you! —Ed.

CELEBRITY SNAP

Gordon Ramsay is an uncompromising master of his craft who strives for greatness and won't tolerate anything less from others — so why the hell is he smiling while holding an issue of MAD? After all, on our very best day, MAD could be described (generously) as "just shy of terrible." To put it in culinary terms, if MAD was an entrée, it would be cold lasagna scraped from the underside of a boot. (Again, that would be a generous description.) We can only assume this picture was taken in the split second before Gordon tore the issue into a shower of (particularly-unfunny) confetti. Are we ashamed of wasting his time and terrified of his wrath? Yes, chef!

RAISING THE BARF

When I saw the cover of issue #537, I said to myself, "What the &%$*?" The only thing that didn't make me want to blow chunks into the porcelain goddess from that issue was Planet Tad (oh, and the "ForceSonic Lightsaber Owner's Manual" only made me vomit in my mouth a little). I'm sorry I can't un-see that issue! I wasted three hours of my life and required several high-intensity emergency therapy sessions (the lawyers for my insurance company will probably be contacting you).

Tom Mitchell • Muskegon, MI

Tom Kippur — We're sorry to hear about your vomit-stained, chunder-filled experience with the issue — and we're not just saying that to appease Muskegon's notoriously fierce insurance-company lawyers! We really empathize with you, since we're the ones producing this puke-inducing garbage! Hundreds of gallons of acid chowder are spilled in our offices as we approve and proofread each script, and assign and receive each piece of art! It's gotten so bad that we each keep a sturdy plastic "spew drum" next to our desks for when the urge inevitably strikes (Art Director Sam Viviano, on the other hand, wears a fanny pack for just that purpose). Thanks for writing — and good luck keeping your breakfast down! —Ed.

ALFRED LOOKALIKE

AN APOLOGY LETTER WE'D LIKE TO SEE

To our valued (surviving) customers:

At Lumber Exterminators, our mission is to provide you with flooring that is beautiful, durable, affordable and, if possible, safe.

Recent media accounts have created confusion about the products we sell. This ad has been created to add to the confusion about these products.

Here are the facts as we would like you to believe them:

- 1. No matter what you've heard, Lumber Exterminators does not sell any flooring products that contain harmful trans-fats, sodium or tobacco. (And they contain no gluten either!) That's how rigid our standards are!
- 2. The findings of the Center for Lethal Products That Could Kill You (CLPTCKY) only relate to certain Chinese-sourced laminate flooring products which have not been sold by Lumber Exterminators since May of 2015. (The fact that we stopped selling our 'Sleep Forever' line of bedroom flooring the day after 60 Minutes aired a blistering report detailing the dangers of these flooring products is totally coincidental.)
- 3. The CLPTCKY findings DO NOT apply to the flooring in our offices, because we bought them someplace else.
- 4. Be assured that all of our current laminate products sold in our stores are completely made in the North American part of China.
- 5. Recent stories about Lumber Exterminators' spokesman Bob Vila being found semi-conscious, gasping for air, in his recently-renovated den have never been substantiated.

We have worked tirelessly to strengthen our safety procedures. The fact that we have significantly picked up the frequency of our ads and hired many more expensive lawyers shows you how serious we are about convincing you that you should still trust our products.

For over 20 years, you and your deceased friends and family members have trusted Lumber Exterminators. We hope that we can count on you as a customer for many more years as we unload inventory from our bulging warehouses.

Well, there's the whole "former swimsuit model" thing.

It would mean that none of the Religious-Right nut job Republicans became President.

Anyone who has a skin care product line called "Caviar Complexe C6" has to be a woman of the people.

The press will inevitably run puff pieces on what Marla Maples has been up to, which is always valuable information to have.

She's still young enough to have more children, which will produce the kind of delightful media frenzy so beloved by the British Royal Family.

Her April 26 birthday is shared by both William Shakespeare and Jet Li. Try telling us that's a coincidence!

Eleven years ago, in a multiplex not far away....

It is a period of unrest. Devoted Star Wars fans weep in their popcorn during the closing credits of the sixth episode (or third, depending on how you count) of their favorite film franchise! Were they upset these were the final adventures of their beloved characters? No, they were upset that George Lucas had massacred their childhoods as ruthlessly as the Clone Troopers took out the Jedi with Order 66. (And if you get that reference, you were DEFINITELY one of those fans!)

But then there was a New Hope! Disney bought Lucasfilm and brought in young movie geek J.J. Abrams to re-invigorate the franchise! Instead of Lucas' cheesy digital sets and lame CGI aliens, Abrams promised to go back to old-school filmmaking! Real locations! Real costumes! Even REAL ACTORS! Fans cheered! (Except for the two dozen or so who thought Hayden Christensen was any good.)

So after all the pre-release excitement....all the pre-release trailers....all the pre-release merchandising (Really, R2-D2 soup cans? Really?!), did it live up to the hype? OF COURSE NOT! After lying dormant for over a decade....

Hey, J.J., your critics say that as director, you borrowed a LOT of elements from Episodes IV, V, and VI: secret plans hidden inside a plucky droid...an X-Wing blowing up the Death Star...the young kid on a desert planet who's pulled into a mission and discovers the power of the Force...the cocky rogue who decides to join a bigger cause...not to mention bringing back Lube, Ham and Laidup! Hell, you even set a scene in a Cantina-like bar!

What can I say?
I only steal from the best!

And there's practically nothing re-hashed from Episodes I, II and III! How do you explain that?

Same answer!

He also

So, my little sister Sophie just had her eighth birthday, and today her gift from Grandma Judy arrived in the mail. Grandma Judy gets a little confused when buying gifts to begin with, but this one was bad, even for her: She wanted to send Sophie one of those "Kidz Bop" albums — which Sophie doesn't even like but instead, she sent her an album by Kid Rock.

APRIL 11, 2016

Come to think of it, I don't understand why anyone would name themselves

"Kid Rock". It sounds like what you say when you can't think of the word "pebble".

Babies "R" Us Lakeville Hospital

APRIL 12, 2016

So, tonight at dinner, my mom and dad were talking about the main thing they talk about these days: What they're going to name my baby brother when he arrives. They've had nine months to think about it, but they can't agree. My dad wants to call him Kenneth, after my grandpa, but my mom hates the name Kenneth and keeps saying, "It's such an old man name. I can't even imagine a baby named Kenneth. That's just weird." She sort of has a point.

My mom wants to name him Steven, which she says is "my all-time favorite boys' name."

I asked why, if it's her favorite, I wound up being named Tad. She said, "Your father won the first time around. I won when it came time to name your sister Sophie, who should thank God every night that she's not named Winifred." And my dad got mad and said, "Winifred's a pretty name! She could go by Fred!" And my mom said, "Listen to yourself."

APRIL 13, 2016

My parents are still fighting over the baby's name. Neither of them are taking my suggestion, which is that they name him Anonymous, so he can take credit for writing all those proverbs and things you see on mugs at gift shops, but they keep telling me that's not how anything works.

Meanwhile, my little sister Sophie just keeps saying they should name him Jennifer, and when my parents tell her that's not a boy's name, she screams back, "That's because I wanted a baby sister!"

APRIL 14, 2016

It's weird that people say fancy parties are "black tie events". They should call them "tuxedo events". Otherwise, it'd be fine if you showed up in, like, cargo shorts, no shirt and a black tie, right?

APRIL 15, 2016

I don't even know how it happened, but my parents got into a fight tonight about the baby name that ended with each of them pulling out their phones and Googling whether there are more serial killers named Steven or Kenneth.

In case you're wondering: It depends on whether or not you count people named "Stephen" in the total.

Which then became the subject of their next argument.

APRIL 16, 2016

I don't get why people call the reverse side of a coin "tails". Did coins used to have a lot of animal tails on the back of them? If so, I think we should go back to that, because that would be kind of awesome.

APRIL 17, 2016

I know sports team names are supposed to be intimidating — like, ferocious animals like the Lions, or the Tigers, or the Bulls. But I think the most intimidating name for any sports team is the Utah Jazz. Because I would much rather spend two hours with a tiger than two hours listening to jazz.

APRIL 18, 2016

Well, my baby brother was born today — my parents were at the store, and my mom went into labor in the shoe aisle of Target, and then my dad drove her to the hospital. My dad said everyone at the store was really nice about it, although he did have to pay for a pair of ruined suede moccasins, and also, he doesn't think we can go back to that Target again anytime soon.

Anyway, she and my dad are still in the hospital, so my mom's friend Pam is going to watch us tonight. I told my dad that we didn't need someone to stay with us, and that I could watch Sophie all by myself, but he said, "Yeah, we just wanted someone responsible to be there with you." And I said, "Isn't Pam the one who mom says 'hasn't been right since the divorce'?" And my dad said, "It was short notice."

So Pam showed up and the first thing she said was, "Do you have triple sec?" Then she had Sophie help her make margaritas in the blender, and now they're watching old episodes of "The Bachelor" together as Pam explains to Sophie her theory of how the winner is always "the second-biggest skank".

And now she's explaining to Sophie what a "skank" is.

So, anyway, it's nice to have someone responsible here.

APRIL 19, 2016

My parents brought my new baby brother home today. They still hadn't named him, so I pitched them my idea: Kevin. It's the exact midpoint between Kenneth and Steven. And they both said that they could live with that name.

Which is a relief, because "Kevin" is such a better name than my backup combination name, "Stenneth."

THE MAD VAULT A classic article from MAD #480 • August 2007

We live in a world of technological wonders. Many things that couldn't even be imagined 100 years ago are now commonplace. Yet one thing, it seems, will probably be forever out of man's reach. Or will it? The possibility of poultry traversing through the ages remains a dream for many. But until such time as this dream can become a reality, we are left to sit and wonder what such a scientific achievement would wrought. Behold!

JOHN CALDWELL 'S

The world might never have heard the name "Colonel Sanders"

WRITER AND ARTIST: JOHN CALDWELL

The annual "Fortune 500" list would be peppered with trillionaire chickens

They'd definitely make their share of "wrong place/wrong time" appearances

Certain ethically challenged yardbirds would take advantage of the fact that they know the results of cockfights beforehand

Their effect on our culture would be vastly greater

Any and all negative references to chickens would be obliterated

Popular songs, bestselling books and major motion pictures would forever sing the praises of the gallant chick that saved Lincoln

Just for laughs, they'd spend a little time taking in the French Revolution—when people's heads were being chopped off

They'd be calling all the shots in the "things that taste just like chicken" department.

Some would learn the hard way, the dangers of looking up their prehistoric ancestors

They would rarely set their arrival date correctly, because at the end of the day, they're still frickin' chickens

CHOCOLATE CAKE-TASTROPHE!

We start with a giant slab of hot, gooey, partially cooked chocolate cake, served on a bed of hot fudge and marshmallow. Then we add the ice cream flavor of your choice (chocolate or vanilla!), crumble a full sleeve of Oreos (substitute Double-Stuf for $0.50!) over it, and sandwich it between two warm, gooey chocolate chip cookies! Our double order is perfect if you want to share!

Sweet Home Apple-bomb-a!

A full bushel of apples cored, slow-baked, then covered in brown sugar crumbles and hot, oozing caramel! Topped off with a halfgallon of our finest, generic French Vanilla ice cream! Just like grandma used to make for the whole family — and only a slightly larger portion!

Go ahead! Feign shock at the monstrous size of your drink when the waiter brings it out - even though you knew it was going to be the size of a birdbath when you ordered it, didn't you, rummy?

ULTIMATE MOONSHINER'S PARADISE

We start with a quart-sized Margarita glass, then let our busboys dump all the half-finished drinks into it, and top it off with a bunch of crazy straws and whatnot. Served at a budget price for our most indiscriminate liquor aficionados!

Nothing says Family Fun like single-handedly draining one of our booze buckets!

Ultimate Margaritas!

What makes ours the greatest margarita ever? Size! We may not use the best ingredients — but trust us, the more you drink, the less you'll care! Choose from 47 indistinguishable varieties, including:

- Watermelon
- Strawberry
- Raspberry
- Painful Lemon
- Classic
- Extreme Classic
- Vaguely Citrus
- Beer-flavored
- Sour Apple
- Menthol
- Jack Daniels Barbeque
- Sour Cream and Chives
- Extra Salty (for an extra 75¢, substitute road salt!)
- Blue
- Detergent-y
- Virgin (contains only half as much alcohol as normal)

Penultimate Margarita!

If you love our Ultimate Margaritas, then you'll probably kind of like this! Made with just slightly inferior ingredients, and served in a chipped glass, it's the perfect libation for those who just don't think they deserve the very best!

Ultimate Electric Rainbow Breezer

What's in our sweetest, most flavorful drink? Who cares! All you need to know is it tastes like Sherbet and everything that comes out of you for the next 12 hours will be in Technicolor! Guaranteed to turn your toilet into a nightmarish kaleidoscope!
